Satellite Collect Many Secrets

STANLEY MEISLER

CANAVERAL, Fla., (AP) — The advanced American satellite in the 142-pound satellite in the most comprehensive package ever orbited by the United States. Enough instruments to perform 15 experiments, National Aeronautics and Administration in Washington reports on signals received by the satellite on the 100th megacycles and released high frequency, that every instrument is working perfectly. The experiments are designed to provide vital information, sending a man into space, many, the instruments measure the intensity and of the deadly radiation in the belts that hover the earth. demonstrate whether the satellite can convert the sun's rays into energy so that a future ship could send radio messages 20 to 50 million miles from the earth's cloud cover. The converted into pictures could help weather forecasters measure the density of microwaves or cosmic dust to their bombardment. part the earth's magnetic field. The behavior or radio to learn more about comets far out in space.

On the night of July 26, Rankin was on his way back to Beaufort from Boston Naval Air Station on a high-altitude navigation flight. His F4U Crusader fighter's engine suddenly stopped for unknown reasons, while he was in a gentle climb at 47,000 feet.

"I had no power, radio, instruments or control over the plane," he said.

Rankin ejected himself from the plane. "The pressure at 47,000 feet is much lower than at sea level, the temperature much colder. I felt a violent decompression, my whole body expanded. It was freezing cold. It had been 75 degrees in the cockpit outside it was 5 below zero. I couldn't keep my eyes open and my nose was bleeding freely. My hands got numb and one wrist and ankle got frostbitten."

"The chute is set by barometric pressure to open at 10,000 feet. After a fall of about two minutes I felt a sharp jerk."

Then he entered the thunderstorm. "The air currents carried me up and down. There was hail and severe lightning. I was afraid I wouldn't make it. It seemed like an eternity."

After more than half an hour of bobbing up and down in the storm, Rankin realized the air was warmer and calmer. Suddenly, he broke out of the overcast about 300 feet above the ground, and spotted trees. It was the first time he had seen the ground since he ejected from the plane.

He struck a tree and his helmeted head hit the trunk, but he was not hurt. He disconnected his chute straps and the next thing he knew I was on the deck."

By his watch, he knew it was 40 minutes since he bailed out.

Rankin looked around and finally found a road that took him to a paved highway.

"Then was the most frustrating thing of all. Cars kept passing me, missing me, but I was on the point of being the frontier."

Ponytailed Killer Faces Life Sentence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ponytailed Killer Rosemarie (Penny) Bjorkland faces a life prison sentence today with the same not-chance she has exhibited since her arrest.

The plump 18-year-old blonde was found guilty of first degree murder and sentenced Thursday by Judge Frank Blum, who tried the case without a jury. He called the killing "wanton, willful."

Penny testified she shot gardener August Norry because she wanted a human for target practice.

Blum ordered her to Corona State Prison for Women.

This Will Be Third Child for Queen

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II is going to have another baby, her third, probably in January or February.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman on the way, disclosing the man announced today that a royal 33-year-old Queen was pregnant during her long and tiring tour of Canada this summer.

The spokesman said the Queen had rejected suggestions that she call off the tour because "she knew the disappointment it would have caused."

The birth will be the first in more than 100 years to a reigning British sovereign. Queen Victoria gave birth to Princess Beatrice in 1857.

Prince Charles, heir to the throne was born Nov. 14, 1948, and Princess Anne Aug. 15, 1950. Queen Elizabeth's coronation was June 2, 1953.

Soviet Newsman Assails Americans

LONDON (AP) — A Soviet commentator today assailed American politicians and journalists he said are trying to figure out whether the United States or Russia will gain more from the Eisenhower-Khrushchev visits.

"This kind of bookkeeping can only do harm," the Moscow radio commentator said.

Magnificent Sights Are in the Heavens Now, If You Possess a Good Telescope

By MARY ANITA LASETER

Let's do a little star gazing. According to a letter recently received from Talbot Field, Sr. of Texarkana, those who possess or have access to telescopes right now are extremely lucky as magnificent sights are in the heavens and can be seen on every clear night.

In speaking particularly of the meteors called Venus, Jupiter and Saturn further information was given. The most brilliant object in the heavens except the sun and the moon is the beautiful Venus. This planet, which is about 15% smaller than the Earth is now low in the evening sky. It looks like a thin crescent moon through a telescope.

You can see Venus in a crescent shape now, but by the middle of August it will be too close to the sun to be seen.

A person doesn't have to suffer a cracked noggin to see "seeing stars" these pretty nights of this month. For instance, there is Jupiter, a bright yellow object in Libra. About eight o'clock in the evening it is high in the northern sky.

On August 11, the moon will be about three degrees north of Jupiter, and a telescope will reveal a slightly flattened disk. Four of the moons of Jupiter can also be seen with a telescope. They are sometimes all on one side and sometimes two on one and one on the other.

One of these moons is sometimes in eclipse as it was on August 2

Red Premier Cool Toward Base Visiting

By JO F. KAN

Washington (AP) — The Soviet ambassador doesn't include U.S. military bases in the list of "many pleasant and interesting places" Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is likely to see in America.

Secretary of Defense H. McElroy said Thursday in a news conference it would be constructive for Khrushchev to see some of the bases during his tour here next month.

McElroy said he knew the Premier said he had no wish to see American bases. But McElroy added he thought it was possible that Khrushchev might want to change his mind.

Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov had a prompt reply. Khrushchev "doesn't usually change his mind," Menshikov said.

McElroy, in response to a newsman's question said the purpose of having Khrushchev visit bases would be more to inform than to impress. He said some American officials like himself have been concerned that a Soviet misinterpretation of U.S. military power might result in Soviet military action.

The defense secretary said he would be willing to show Khrushchev installations such as the Strategic Air Command base at Omaha and the Cape Canaveral, Fla. missile test site.

Building Burns Following an Explosion

VAN BUREN, Ark. (AP) — A frame building which housed a fire reaping firm exploded and burned early today, seconds after two employees walked out the front door.

Jimmy Grizzle, 18, and Larry Smith, 17, both of Fort Smith were injured slightly by flying glass from a display window shattered in the blast.

"They had been reaping tires and left because they ran out of material. No one else was in the building."

Authorities said the origin of the explosion was unknown. A fire department spokesman said it may have been caused by an accumulation of natural gas which was signed accidentally.

Patrolman Jack Johns saw the explosion of the 4-by-30 foot one-story structure which housed the Van Buren Tire Co.

"The building seemed to raise up a few feet and settle back down," Johns said. "It was engulfed in flames almost immediately. The roar of the explosion was terrific. I saw a lot of smoke and then the two boys came running out."

Firemen were unable to save the building.

Tillman Grizzle of Fort Smith, father of Jimmy Grizzle, owned the business. He could not estimate the loss immediately but said it would "run into the thousands."

The two youths, who will be on the football squad at Fort Smith High School this fall, were released after treatment at a hospital.

Wife of Minister Dies at Little Rock

CONWAY, Ark. (AP) — Mrs. Elizabeth Olivia Clark, 38, wife of the oldest minister in the Little Rock Methodist Conference died at her home here today.

She and the Rev. T. T. Clark, 62, had been married 68 years. They were wed in Valentine's Day in 1891.

The Rev. Mr. Clark is retired. Other survivors include four sons and three daughters.

Funeral services will be held at the First Methodist Church here Sunday and burial will be at Conway.

Searchers Seek More Bodies in Blast-torn City

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — Eight business blocks of this southern Oregon city, seared and shattered when a truck load of explosives blew up like a bomb, were sealed off by the National Guard today while searchers sought more victims.

At least 11 persons were killed early Friday when the 6½ tons of dynamite and other explosives detonated after fire spread to the parked truck from a nearby building blaze.

Coroner C. H. Babbitt said he was certain that there were other deaths. He said ashes, believed to be the remains of humans, were found in a charred rooming house near the blast scene. The ashes are being sent to a laboratory for testing.

Some 100 persons were injured by the blast 52 of them requiring hospital treatment.

The explosion, which eyewitnesses said sent a column of flame hundreds of feet into the air, caused extensive damage to the eight block section on the edge of the main business district. Buildings in some 22 blocks around the blast scene were damaged to a lesser extent. Firemen said they had reports of windows being broken as far away as seven miles.

Arlo Jacklin, mayor of this city of 12,200, said property damage would probably total 10 to 12 million dollars.

The truck loaded with two tons of stick dynamite and 4½ tons of the explosive mixture of ammonium nitrate and oil had been parked near the Gerretsen Building Supply Co. building for the night by its driver, George Rutherford, 47, of Chehalis, Wash.

It is believed that a fire started in trash cans and then spread to the Gerretsen structure. Firemen were fighting the fire — which spread quickly — when at 1:15 a.m. the truck blew up with a deafening roar.

Northwestern Pennsylvania, Celebrating Centennial of Oil, Beckons to Tourists

LAKES, FORESTS AND SCENIC WATERWAYS are highlights of a Magic Circle trip in northwestern Pennsylvania, land of the Oil Centennial. The national spotlight again will be focused on Titusville where the world's first successful oil well was drilled in 1859 by "Colonel" Edwin L. Drake. Highlights include the restoration and museum at Drake Well Memorial Park; Pithole, the "ghost" of a once-roaring boom town; rich farm and dairy country; prosperous Oil City, site of the nation's oldest well in continuous operation; Cook Forest State Park, a mecca of primeval grandeur; majestic Allegheny River Valley; Warren and its state fish hatchery; Pymatuning Reservoir and wildflower refuge where it's not uncommon to see either bald eagles or fish so numerous and tame that ducks walk on their backs. Connaut Lake, water playground with a dude ranch atmosphere; Meadville, a city of colonial charm and home of Allegheny College.

Editor's Note: This is the 36th in a series of suggested highway tour maps which the Hope Star is publishing weekly. This is excellent material to cut out and paste up in a scrapbook for future reference when planning your vacation trip.

By EDWARD COLLIER

One hundred years ago the name "Titusville" was on the lips of a young nation. In 1859 the American spotlight again is hitting this sturdy, individualistic little metropolis in northwestern Pennsylvania. Here is the centennial focal point, celebrating the drilling of the world's first successful oil well.

This year, as in 1859, thousands are converging on Titusville from every direction. Only this time it is over the six black-lipped highways that are like spokes entering the hub of a wheel. The town forms a Magic Circle trip around a pastoral land dotted by lakes, forests, farms, scenic waterways and tree-shaded cities that are proud of their modern industrial plants.

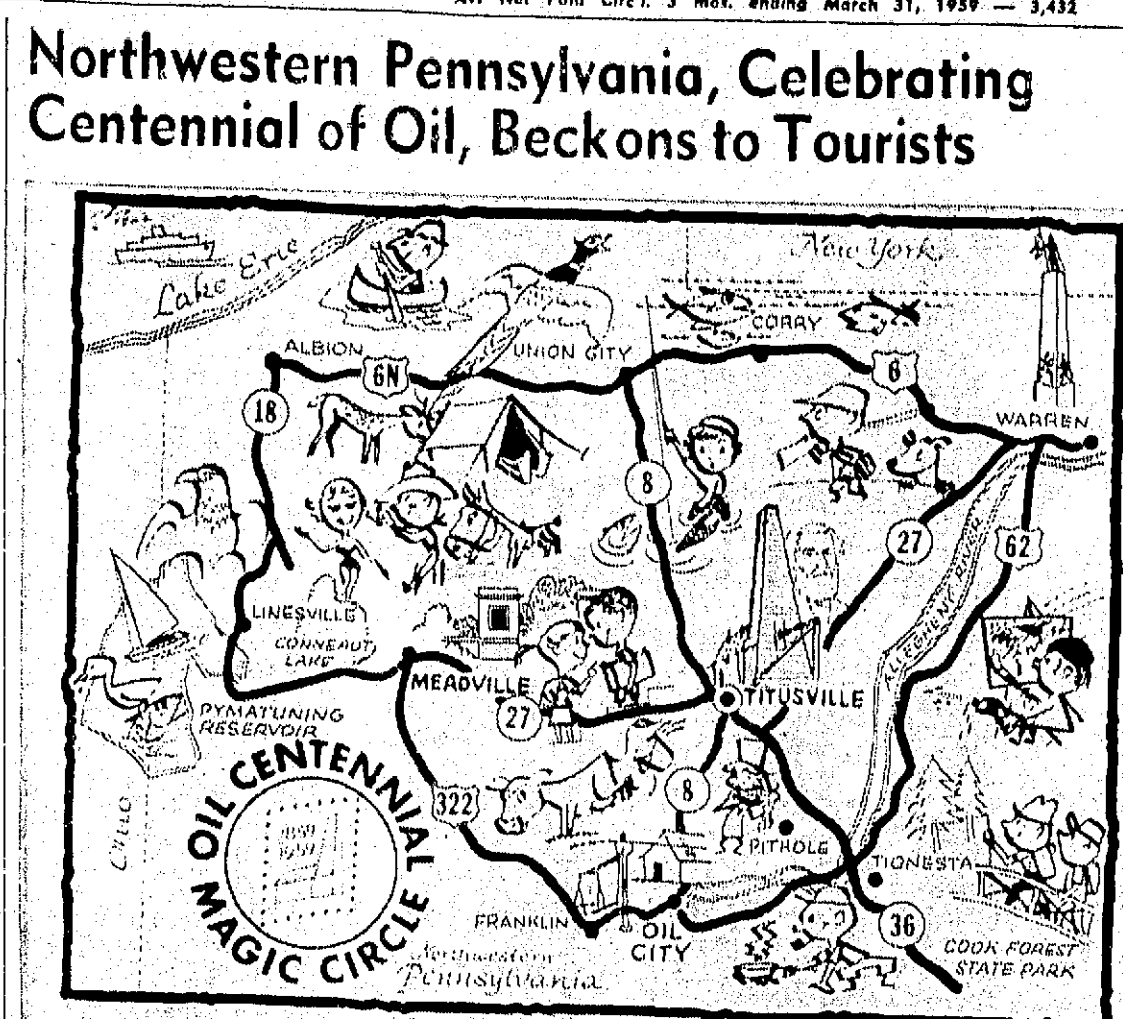

All traces are gone of the roaring Pennsylvania oil boom towns that made the Wild West of fact, fable and film pale by comparison. Here cities sprung up overnight, rearing fires nearly destroyed many of them, but they were quickly rebuilt. Each boasted plush hotels, saloons, false-fronted stores, tents. Out of them operated the speculators and drillers, the gamblers and painted ladies, the adventurers and businessmen. The deeply rutted streets alternately were a morass of mud or hub-deep in dust.

The appropriate place to start your tour of this land where the petroleum industry was born is just outside Titusville at Drake Well Memorial Park. This scene is as peaceful today as it was before the white man came and the Indians dug shallow pits to get the seeping black stuff out of the ground for medicinal purposes.

Historic Park

Myrtle best describes the setting of the 22-acre tract, which is administered by the Pennsylvania State Historical and Museum Commission. Tastefully landscaped with flowering shrubs, grass and tall shade trees, this park is nestled between two steep verdant hills covered with oaks, ash, maples and white pine. The deep green waters of historic Oil Creek run beside the park.

After leaving your car at the entrance, the logical thing to do would be to visit the museum devoted to the history of oil. Here is told the story of how Edwin L. Drake, a young railroad conductor,

Marine Bails Out of Plane Going 500 mph, 9 Miles Up, Lands 40 Minutes Later

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — The Marine pilot bailed out of his crippled jet nine miles above the earth at 500 miles an hour. He did not reach the earth in his parachute for 40 minutes, and received a buffeting from a raging thunderstorm that made him feel like he "was playing the whole Notre Dame football team."

Col. William H. Rankin, 39, the pilot, recounted his story today. He is recovering in the hospital here while doctors study his reactions to what may have been the highest altitude parachute jump ever made.

Col. Rankin also broke his right hand. He's not sure when it happened.

Rankin, a bachelor, was a ground officer in World War II and flew during the Korean War.

On the night of July 26, Rankin was on his way back to Beaufort from Boston Naval Air Station on a high-altitude navigation flight. His F4U Crusader fighter's engine suddenly stopped for unknown reasons, while he was in a gentle climb at 47,000 feet.

Calvary Church Meet Starts Aug. 10

Revival services will begin Aug. 10, at the Calvary Baptist Church, located on West Ave. 8 in Hope. Services will be nightly at 8 o'clock with morning services beginning on Tuesday and being held each morning at 10 o'clock.

The Evangelist for this meeting will be James Birkhead Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Mountain Home, Ark. Rev. Birkhead served the First Baptist Church of Hope as Music Education Director the years 1948 to 1950. In 1951 Rev. Birkhead surrendered to preach and later attended Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and is now pastor of the First Baptist Church of Mountain Home, Ark.

The singing for this meeting will be led by Herbert "Red" Johnson who is a deacon in the Mountain Home Baptist Church and is a full time evangelistic singer.

Viet Nam President Journeys to China

TOKYO (AP) — President Ho Chi Minh of Communist North Viet Nam journeyed across China today possibly on his way to talk with Mao Tse-tung about whether to move against their pro-Western neighbor, the little Indochinese kingdom of Laos.

Bands of Communist-trained tribesmen began attacking Laotian posts along the North Viet Nam border last week. The Laotian Defense Ministry said Thursday that all posts had been retaken and the border once more was quiet. But unconfirmed reports said the insurgents were massing five battalions just across the frontier.

Navy Reveals New Device for Foreign Missiles

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new radar device to spy across oceans and give a quick report on ballistic missile launchings is being developed, the U.S. Navy says.

The radar also could be used as one means of monitoring sneak tests of nuclear weapons violation of any international agreement.

Dr. William J. Thaler of the Office of Naval Research and "father" of the new radar setup called Project Topce, said Friday night:

"I would hope you could double the warning time."

This would mean that the United States would have almost 30 minutes instead of 15 minutes — possible under the U.S. system now being built — in which to launch counter-weapons. Military men figure it would take about 30 minutes for a missile fired in the Soviet Union to reach the United States.

Thaler, 33, talked to newsmen about the project. Asked if the Navy had tested the device against Soviet ICBM testing launchings, he replied "no."

"Trials with the device, which he said is still in the early 'bread-board' developmental stage, have worked at what amount to intercontinental ranges—5,500 miles."

Thaler said the device is located at an undisclosed place in continental United States and picked up the ballistic missile nuclear explosive tests made last summer in Project Argus in the South Atlantic and the Johnston Island tests in the Pacific.

Following embargoed for 6 a.m. EST)

However, the New York Times said today that several stations are now in operation, adding: "These stations are secret."

The Times story continued: "The number and locations of Soviet missile and satellite firing have been monitored for the last several months from locations within the boundaries of the continental United States."

The newspaper also said: "The system can also determine the location of missile-launching sites and can evaluate the performance of a rocket thousands of miles away. Such information has already yielded important guidance lines on the state of the Soviet missile program."

Youths Wash Cars to Aid Closed Schools

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — With a Confederate flag overhead, a group of teenagers washed cars today, hoping to spark a move to reopen the now-closed segregated high school.

The students of Roney High School, opened last fall after public high schools were closed, had hoped to launch their car-washing drive on Gov. Orval E. Faubus' private auto. His car was out of town and they settled for the Cadillac of Dr. J. H. Roney, for whom Roney was named.

It was Little Rock Private School Corp., who announced Tuesday that the private school would not operate this year "because we're broke."

The students began scrubbing $400,000 dim prospects of raising $400,000 and with doubt that the school would open even if money was available. Roney has said that the board would consider operating only if funds were provided.

"We're not trying to raise the whole amount," said Sharon Morris, 15, a spokeswoman for the group. "We're just trying to get a fund going."

She said the students "just want to get our school open again."

They are opposed to going to school with Negroes. The Little Rock public high schools are scheduled to open Wednesday with token integration — six Negroes at two formerly all-white schools.

"It would be almost impossible for me to go to school with Negroes," Sharon said, "particularly in the unsettled situation we have now." She added, "It might be possible in more settled circumstances."

Securities Code Is Ruled Valid

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Arkansas' 1950 Uniform Securities Code is constitutional, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

Dick Simpson, state bank commissioner requested the ruling, saying the question of validity arose in connection with administration of the measure, Act 254.

Simpson's opinion also informed the court that the appropriation to support the reconstituted securities division of the Bank Department is valid.

HILL SMOKE

BY L. P. HOLMES

By L. P. HOLMES
THE STORY: Grady Haskell has come to Resurrection to search for a missing woman. He is greeted with suspicion, violence and evasive answers. On the road near town he meets Katie Levening, who also has questions to answer concerning her behavior.

Chapter XI
Katie's glance came back to him.

"Why was I waiting for you?" Because though I felt you would show, I was hoping you wouldn't. Hoping—well—that you weren't real. Which sounds entirely ridiculous, doesn't it?"

"In one way, yes in another, no." The dryness of Haskell's tone held on. "However, since last night, nothing really surprises me."

She knew what he meant. Bruises were a lingering stain under the weathered bronze of his face.

"I had nothing to do with that affair."

"So you say. But I saw your Hayfork foreman, Tender, meet you at the hotel. And after that it was he and your Hayfork outfit that laid for me and worked me over."

She flared a little. "Not by any one of mine. I have told you one of—of exactly what took place in your hotel room."

"Yet you were ready to kill me," Haskell reminded. "You were wishing for a gun."

"Quite naturally I was furious. I had a right to be."

"I think I had reason to be a little concerned myself," Haskell drawled.

The slight surge of stormy feeling had darkened her eyes. She was, he thought, very fair to look upon. His tone turned kinder.

"Just what did you expect to find in my saddlebag?"

She glanced at the star on his shirt, seemed about to answer, but ended by shrugging and saying nothing. He tried another beam to suddenly lose all power.

"Worst country ever saw for a while."

"Of speech," Haskell said with some sarcasm. Then he added, "through there'll be those who'll wish they had no hand in it."

"Well, I could have done without you in the affair in my room. I'm not mad over that at all. Because it did have one very pleasant moment."

Strong color rushed across her face. Her shoulders stiffened and the old high pride came storming through.

"I certainly don't recall any!" The retort was charged with a scorn so abrupt and cutting it made Haskell redder and squarer.

"So now you know I'm real, and that I carry the star. What's the matter?"

"That's the road was barred to me?"

"That's the road was barred to me?"

"That's the road was barred to me?"

"That's the road was barred to me?"

Police Make Plans for School Opening

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Police made quiet preparation today for the handling of any disorder that might flare when public high schools open on an anticipated basis next week.

Chief Gene Smith said his force did not know what to expect but wanted to be ready.

Six Negroes are scheduled to join about 1,500 whites at Central and Hall high schools. Three Negroes were assigned to each by the school board.

Reports persisted that Gov. Orval E. Faubus may summon an extraordinary session of the Legislature and seek new anti-integration laws. A school-closing measure Faubus used to close Little Rock's four public high schools last fall was ruled invalid by federal court several weeks ago.

Selection of Meany was announced Thursday by John W. Mahan, VFW president. The medal will be presented at the VFL convention at Los Angeles Aug. 31.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Preparations for a Billy Graham Crusade in Little Rock next month got under way yesterday with a meeting of a Ministerial Assn. committee.

Charles Riggs of Nashville, Tenn., who accompanied Graham on his Australian crusade, outlined objectives of the two-day session, scheduled here Sept. 12-13 in War Memorial Stadium.

an answer from Bill Hoe, "I'll depend on how quick he gets out. If right away, you should state it about this time come Friday."

He dumped the letter into the sack.

"Good part of a week, eh?" pondered Haskell. "Well, that'll give me a chance to catch up on my sleep."

In the hotel dining room he took the small wall table, and now it was the girl, Ruby, who brought him his food. That morning, from the upstairs window, she had seen him bring Sten Coulter to heel with a quick and savage ruthlessness, and the incident had made him big in her young eyes. Now her shy, half eager manner was gone, she was smiling from him.

"Sure is a something," he drawled, teasing, "having a pretty girl tidy up your room and wait on you at meal time."

She flushed. "I wanted a chance to tell you how glad I was to see you knock that Sten Coulter down."

Haskell cocked an eyebrow. "So-o Why would that be?"

The heat in her cheeks deepened. "Because—well, because father—I mean, because I'm just—Ruby, he acts—oh, you know."

"Yeah," murmured Haskell. "I think I know. Next time I meet you with Mister Coulter, maybe I'll knock him down again. Now what were you going to say about your father?"

She appeared not to hear this, but hurried off and did not come near him again.

An after meal close between his teeth, Haskell stood on the hotel porch and watched the stage, a fresh team in the traces, roll out of town. After which he went along to the Canyon House, looked in, did not see who he wanted, so turned into the street again and sauntered back to the store. Here he stood quietly aside until a housewife with a big eyed baby on her arm, flustered dickered with Milo, took over a basket of groceries. When she had gone, Haskell asked his question.

"Where might I find Joe Peele about now?"

"Depends," Jellick answered. "If he's managed to scrape up a point somewhere, you could find him sprawled in most any odd corner, sleeping it off. But if he's a change, then he'll probably be hanging around his shanty, nursing the shakes."

"Where is this shanty?" Haskell queried.

"Over on the river bank, north of town. Stands by itself. You can't miss it." Speculation narrowed Milo Jellick's eyes. "I suppose it's none of my business what you want the town drinks for, but I'm wondering."

"Why," said Haskell, speaking crisply, "it's like this. Last night a crowd of eager buccaroos had me down in the dust of the street. And who was it? It put a stop to that bit of local heroism. Not any of the sober, respectable citizens of this town. It was just Joe Peele, the town drunk as you call him, who stomped in. So, from now on, drunk or sober Joe Peele is my good friend. And I like to visit with my friends."

There was a sarcasm in these words which built a dull flush in Milo Jellick's round cheeks.

"That," he said quietly, "wasn't a little rough, Haskell. I couldn't all happen to quarters out back. And as I've told you, I heard nothing of it. I know nothing of it until it was all over."

His tone modifying, Haskell said, "Didn't set out to see Joe Peele accepted for what he is, a pretty good man."

"He'll be accepted for exactly what he proves himself worth," Jellick said curtly.

"Maybe so," retorted Haskell.

"Same place it picks up the incoming," Jellick answered, in answer from Bill Hoe. "I'll depend on how quick he gets out. If right away, you should state it about this time come Friday."

He dumped the letter into the sack.

"Good part of a week, eh?" pondered Haskell. "Well, that'll give me a chance to catch up on my sleep."

Haskell cocked an eyebrow. "So-o Why would that be?"

The heat in her cheeks deepened. "Because—well, because father—I mean, because I'm just—Ruby, he acts—oh, you know."

"Yeah," murmured Haskell. "I think I know. Next time I meet you with Mister Coulter, maybe I'll knock him down again. Now what were you going to say about your father?"

Search Starts for Missing Grider

HOPE, Ark. (AP) — A search was under way today for William Joseph Grider, 15-year-old high school football player who has been missing since Wednesday.

The youth, 6-1 and weighing 160 pounds, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Mackellon of Hope.

He was given a ride to Stuttgart by Morris Dillard, a neighbor, Wednesday morning. The youth had between $20 and $40 with him. He went to Stuttgart to buy clothing, the elder Mackellon said.

The boy's father said he knew the reason why George would leave home.

Relations in Gould, Monticello and Little Rock said they had not seen the youth, who played football at Clarkson High School.

DOROTHY DIX

Hat Poses A Problem For Sunday Schooler

By DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix: My grand-daughter, her mother and I are having quite a discussion about hats. Should the girl wear one to Sunday School? Ava, my grand-daughter, is a fine-looking girl of 14. She claims she's the only one in her class who wears a hat and she feels foolish appearing in one without a hat. This is creating quite a problem, so we would like your advice.—T.F.

Dear T.F.: There's a time and place for everything—including hats. I agree with you that a hat should be worn at church or Sunday School. The modern tendency towards laxity can go too far. If people can't observe certain tenets of good taste, it's up to the pastor of your church or the superintendent of Sunday School to remind them. Your granddaughter may feel foolish wearing a full-fledged hat, but she could compromise on the wearing of a charming flower-boy hat. She can cover her head—and the conventions—and look far from foolish.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm in my late 30's, although no one would think so—I look much younger. A year ago a man came to work in our office and I was attracted to him. We only dated once—at my request—but have had many congenial conversations. We see each other at group meetings and I often catch him gazing at me lovingly. I think I have a very strong physical attraction for him and that he's afraid of going too far. If he does ask for a date, he may be separated or divorced or have had an unfortunate love affair. I want to know him better but it's awfully difficult to get him to meet me halfway.—Fanny

Dear Fanny: A girl of 30 plus has been around long enough to know that men may look is not to be taken for granted. You have pleasant memories of a delightful summer. Can't you settle for that? Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my letter, "Summer Romance," which has a few words to say about simmering down from a summer high.

Dear Dorothy Dix: During the next school year I'll have very little time to spend with my friends. I have late afternoon sessions will be loaded with homework. Saturday will be spent on homework and household chores, leaving me only Sundays for social activity. That would be all right, except that Mom has always insisted that I visit grand-father on Sunday afternoon. I certainly don't mind, except that I will have absolutely no free social time. I've just started dating, too. My grandfather lives quite a distance from us and the visits involve two buses, my cousins who live around the corner from him, and a very long drive. I don't think you can get to see him at all. Don't you think once or twice a month would be enough visiting or do you agree with Mom that I should go every week?—Priscilla

Dear Priscilla: The very young should be flattered to know how much their visits—or attentions—of any kind—mean to the old. Every one has—or should have—its responsibilities including even the young teen ages. Youth owes an obligation to the old and the world would be a much pleasanter, cheerier place if it is in almost every other country of the globe. Your visits to Grandpa mean a very great deal to him. Can't you work them in some other time besides Sunday? As a matter of fact, I think you would be doubly welcome on another day. Grandpa probably realizes that the Sunday visit is imposed on you by Mom and is simply a matter of routine. How about altering your homework schedule a bit, doubling up some morning so you can visit Grandpa on another morning? Have a late breakfast with him, bring him a little school news and get to class on time. Or shift things around on Sunday to permit a lunch "date" with him. Drop in unexpectedly; don't make it a regularly scheduled trip. It may take a bit of sacrifice but it provides him with a whole week of remembrance and expectation. Earn your Sunday off with this bit of real charity.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've fallen hard for a boy two years older than I. He's in the Navy and is leaving for active service soon. We want to get married before he leaves so I can be near him. I'll be a sophomore next year but school is very boring to me and I'd just as soon quit. You may think I'm too young (16) to know true love but I've had several cases of puppy love and I know this is different.—Shirley

Dear Shirley: GO BACK TO SCHOOL. Right now you're looking for an excuse to quit. These are the years for learning—about marriage among other things. The more you work now, the better off you'll be later.

"But last night he stood pretty tall and wide, out there in the street."

Haskell left circling through the alley between the store and the Canyon House, then to the river bank where a boarded cabin crouched.

Joe Peele sat on a bench by the open door. He got to his feet, a scious as Haskell approached. "Can't remember when I last had a visitor," he said.

Sunday & Monday at Saenger

"It Happened To Jane" stars Doris Day, Jack Lemmon and Ernie Kovacs and is one of the best family pictures movie fans will see this year. See it and tell your neighbors about the picture so they can enjoy a swell treat, too. Relax in Air Conditioned comfort and view this warm, wonderful movie on the Saenger's giant screen in beautiful color. You'll be glad you did.

Tues.-Wed.-Thurs. at Saenger

Pat Wayne, Yvonne Craig and Dennis Hopper share acting honors in "The Young Land" coming to the Saenger for three days. Pat, in the great Wayne tradition for acting, does a superb job in his first starring role.

Botulism Claims Another Victim
IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Botulism, a rare form of food poisoning killed another member of a family here Thursday. Kenneth Nelson, 45, of his family to die since they ate from a jar of home-canned beets. His daughter Wanda, 15, and his stepfather Aaron (Growth), 74, died shortly after the family was stricken last week.

Nelson's wife Naomi, 41, remained in critical condition but hospital authorities said they noted some improvement. She was allowed to leave an iron lung Thursday. In its most severe form botulism paralyzes the breathing muscles.

Two other members of the family, Lavicia Growth and Martha Nelson, 4, were reported improving at a hospital here. All were visiting at the Growth farm. Mrs. Growth is Nelson's mother.

Saenger Theatre Coming Soon

Night Boating Can
Double Cruising Fun
By WM. TAYLOR McKEOWN
Editor, Popular Boating
Distributed by NEA Service

Start your boating week-ends the evening before, and you can double your fun and range of operation.

More families are heading out into the dark on Friday nights. Boating at night is a simple, short-cut to more pleasure afloat. Frequently the wind dies down at sunset. The water is likely to be more calm than at any time

Time Halts Hope Boys With 7-0 Lead

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. (AP) — Finals are scheduled tonight in the state Little League baseball tournament here. Paragould, 3, meets the winner of the delayed Hope-Pine Bluff game.

Hope was leading 7-0 at the end of four innings last night when the game was postponed because of a time limit. It was to be completed at 3 p.m.

The final game is set for 7:30 p.m.

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru today welcomed the coming exchange of visits between President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, terming it one of the best pieces of news for a considerable time.

during the day. Most of the waterway traffic drops anchor. No boat is too small for an early start when the water is still glassy before sunset. Lighting equipment required is simple—a combination red and green bow light plus a white stern light costing no more than from $5 to $10—for a boat under 20 feet. These lights can be powered with flashlight batteries, a six-volt "hotshot" or a six or 12-volt automotive-type battery like those used to start large outboard motors.

Craft of more than 16 feet normally come equipped with navigation lights. More than likely a smaller boat already carries these lights for "emergencies."

But being caught out at night should be no emergency. Plan the first trip to cover water where lights along the shore represent familiar landmarks. Make the distance short and check your charts carefully so you always know where you are. Carry a small flashlight for looking at charts and compass (a red bulb can keep the light from dazzling you). Use a strong spotlight for identifying buoys and channel markers.

Rules of the road are the same as in daylight, and you will find you can recognize a commercial boat at anchor, or a tug with barges in tow, just from the light combinations they display. Normally a red light coming toward you from your right will be a boat that has the right of way.

Confidence will come quickly and you will be ready for a longer trip.

Head out before dusk, if possible, so that you have the pleasure of the sunset while your eyes can get used to the dark. Run to your destination, anchor and sleep until sunrise—ready for a full day. If your boat is small, take along sleeping bags and air mattresses. Sleep aboard or pull up on a beach.

Probably you will not want to travel as fast and as far as you would on a daytime trip, but you will soon find nights afloat are nothing to fear and offer an additional and picturesque pleasure for the family.

Northwestern

for from Connecticut, came to Titusville endowed with vision—plus meager funds and the little of "Colonel" given him by a New Haven banker who headed the Seneca Oil Company in which Drake had invested his life savings of $200. With little help or financing, Drake persisted until he worked out a way to drill through rock and tap the earth's petroleum supply for the first time.

Your attention initially will be drawn to the quaint and often photographed replica of the original enclosed derrick and engine house which has been set up over the exact location of Drake's first well. Realism has been achieved by staining the roughly hewn planks and timbers with crude oil.

Boom Day Relics
Picnic tables have been built in the shaded grove back of the well, but here the focus is on recently restored sheds which hold fascinating relics of the boom days. A sign on one structure identifies it as the "Oil Creek Fire Station—Moonlight Torpedo Company." Inside is the black-painted vintage buggy, its body painted a vivid blue as it was in the days when respectful citizens gave it a wide berth any time it appeared on the road carrying its can of lethal "soup" which was and still is used to increase the productive flow of oil wells. Tins of the powerful explosive were carried in felt-lined compartments under the uneasy driver's seat.

The other prize exhibit is the handsome red steam fire engine with its black boiler, tall brass smoke stack and round brass seat for the driver. For 40 years this 1888 City of Titusville horse-drawn vehicle fought all the famous oil fires in the region. It was called the "Colonel Drake" and still bears this original name plate on its side.

The rose and tan native-cut sandstone museum is both a treasure house and a tribute to petroleum. One corner section contains a big-scale miniature of a modern-day oil field where pumps run at eight miles, elsewhere there is an 1800 rig in operation.

Visitors of all ages are attracted to the display of lamps—fancy and plain, ancient and exotic. Included are Egyptian relics from the time of the Pharaohs, priceless oriental bases that look like Aladdin's lamp, graceful oil lanterns of every era, stone Eskimo receptacles which utilized blubber to give light in the snow huts of Greenland and a fluid lamp from an early church in Rome.

Dramatic Touch
"Colonel" Drake's personal effects lend a sense of warmth and drama to the methodical museum. There is everything from a tall silk hat to his folding pocket toothbrush and from a gold leaf liqueur set with eight decanters to his favorite place to rest, a chaise longue-type piece that resembles our present-day contour chairs.

Unlike so many of the boom towns that have disappeared, Titusville has continued to thrive in its own conservative way—a thriving, clean little city ringed by hills, one of which is topped by mansions and ultramodern homes.

In driving through the sedate older residential section, there are two highlights: the charming two-story white frame house where lived Ida M. Tarbell, biographer of Lincoln and noted oil historian, when she was graduated from the Titusville High School in 1873; and the ornate and pretentious gingerbread "old McKinney place," built by one of the first to strike it rich with "black gold." A belated tribute to "Colonel" Drake is the monument erected in 1901 at his grave in Woodlawn Cemetery, to honor his memory and his contribution to American industry.

Titusville is a veritable crossroads of America this summer. Automobiles with license plates from every state, as well as Canada and Mexico, are in town to participate in the three-month series of Oil Centennial events.

August 10th will mark the start of the drilling of a new oil well and on August 27th, the 100th birthday, shooting of the newly finished well will be televised nationally. The same day a commemorative postage stamp is to be issued at both the Titusville Post Office and Main Street School, a time capsule sealed at Drake Well Memorial Park with Pennsylvania Governor David L. Lawrence presiding, a pipeline message transmitted from Texas will be received, a Second Century Conclave of Oil staged with participation by leaders of the petroleum industry and, as an exciting climax, the eventful day will be concluded with specially designed fireworks. The celebration is to continue on August 28th with a soap box derby, swimming carnival and an evening street dance. The Grand Parade of Oil, featuring historical floats and top musical and marching groups from across the nation, will be staged August 29th.

The Magic Circle out of Titusville leads south (Pennsylvania 3) through pleasant farm lands, each with its own woodlot. Seven miles out of town you can take a side road to what may well become one of the most eminent ghost towns in the East. Today Pithole City has reverted to green fields where for a brief moment in history there was a rowdy, roaring metropolis of 15,000 people.

with more than 50 hotels, countless saloons, banks, churches and every type of attraction known to bonanza towns. Among the most famed—or notorious—of its citizens were Ben Hogan who called himself "the wickedest man in the world"; French Kate, his business associate in lurid ventures; and Coal Oil Johnny, who quickly ran through a fortune at a time of up to $8,000 a day. In 1864 John Wilkes Booth sold out his interest in a well that was destined to "blow in" only a few weeks after he had assassinated President Lincoln.

Prosperous City
A few miles south is thriving Oil City, compactly sandwiched between canyon walls of the Allegheny River. Photogenic little waterfalls topple down the cliffs as you drive in through the northeastern suburb, which once was the oil boom town of Venango City. Here, as the highway goes through a big refinery, there is a state historical marker which will remind you to park and walk a few hundred feet to see what is claimed to be the nation's oldest oil well in continuous operation.

A regional shipping and distribution center, Oil City's continuing affluence comes from its refineries and plants that manufacture pumping machinery, steel barrels and tubing and oil well supplies. Typical of the civic pride is the sleek and ultramodern plant of the daily newspaper, suitably called The Derrick.

Cook Forest is a bonus of beauty that is yours for the auto exploration of western Pennsylvania's good side roads. Near the entrance of this state park is the largest and most magnificent stand of white pine in Pennsylvania. To this land of peace, quiet, floral abundance and primeval grandeur come campers, sightseers, artists, lucky tourists. Thousands return each year to spend their vacations; hundreds of families stay all summer to swim, go canoeing, fishing, horseback riding or hiking over the secluded old Indian trails. One of the favorite eye-catching spots is the panorama of the green Clarion River Valley from atop Seneca Point. Song-fests around the campfires and the glow of gasoline lanterns contribute to the leisurely, friendly feeling of the summer nights.

Lush Forests
From Oil City you can turn east (U. S. 62) and in minutes be driving through lush forests that are typical of this part of Pennsylvania. The vista that frames your windshield when you emerge from the canyon 11 miles later is one of the loveliest in the eastern part of the United States, regardless of season. For miles the wide, placid Allegheny River flows through a valley whose steep hills are covered with fern, hemlock and hardwood trees. Rhododendron and laurel grow in profusion to bring springtime glamour; in fall the oaks and maples convert the countryside into a splash of flaming red and russet glory. So colorful is the land that one prominent north of Tidoute is called Indian Paint Hill.

Summer homes, fishing camps and recreation facilities of all kinds continue to dot the river valley almost to Warren, pleasantly located on the banks of the Allegheny. Modern homes and attractive homes and the architecturally striking new St. Joseph's Church add to the city's distinction. Wide streets protected by venerable shade trees lead down to the waterfront. Here at the main intersection stands an impressive monument to the region's men who fought for the Union in the Civil War at the battles of Missionary Ridge, Wilderness, Peach Tree Creek, Spotsylvania, Appomattox.

Pymatuning Reservoir is another popular weekend trip objective for motoring families from Ohio and New York state, as well as western Pennsylvania. Not only is there good fishing but also it is a migratory waterfowl refuge for ducks of all varieties. Often you also see blue herons, American egrets, ring-necked pheasants, ruffed grouse and quail. Bald eagles have nested in the area for years.

The State Game Commission maintains a museum near the causeway that crosses an arm of the lake to Linesville. More than 300 fine mounted specimens of waterfowl and shore birds are shown in flight as well as standing. The phenomenon didn't materialize when I visited the museum in the spring, but natives and tourists alike swear that at a nearby spillway the carp are so big and numerous that the ducks walk across their backs to get to food thrown out by visitors.

Water Playground
Connell Lake, top water playground of the area, offers sailing, golf, water skiing, swimming. The resorts provide a full slate of entertainment ranging from old-time melodramas to dude ranch affairs, western style.

Meadow, which sits in a bowl of green hills, has a rare colonial English town. Here light industry has flourished and yet there is a "Farmers Market" three times a week. The countryside is noted for the quality of its maple syrup and the city from wool, potatoes, fruit and dairy cattle. Many of the side streets are still paved with brick and the town square which citizens call "The Diamond" is faced by buildings of dignified beauty such as the colonial-styled New Gravel County court house and the Unitarian Church with its imposing white portals and thick walls that have been painted a dark red. Pride of Meadville is Allegheny College, one of the oldest and most respected co-educational liberal arts colleges in the country. This is a campus with a story-book look.

Cheerful looking, well groomed and vibrant appearing young men walk through the handsome brick structures. Bentley Hall, with its white trim and red painted brick walls, has a regal air that is enhanced on the nights when the many college events to which the public is welcome.

Kicker Rocket Helps Send Up Satellite

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This is how the latest U. S. Satellite was sent into orbit.
A five-pound "kicker" rocket rode at the base of the satellite. If needed, this was designed to be fired by a ground signal. Scientists planned to use it only if they determined that the satellite would burn up in the earth's atmosphere.

The kicker would add 50 to 100 miles to the payload's low point. The satellite was expected to make only one orbit every 12 hours because of the long journey into space, his compares with an average of two hours for most earlier satellites.

The paddlewheel satellite carried the most comprehensive scientific package ever sent aloft by the United States. This symbolizes the complex type of research planned for future space exploration with bigger vehicles. More powerful rockets now being developed, such as Thor-Delta, Atlas-Able, Vega Centaur and Saturn will make this advance possible.

The paddlewheel devices were grouped in six main categories:
1. Three instruments to measure the extent and intensity of the Van Allen radiation belts that cover over the earth at altitudes between 1300 and possibly up to 52,000 miles.

Although the satellite's intended sojourn is only 33,000 miles, these instruments could record radiation millions of miles above the Van Allen band.

2. The solar paddle system. During launch the four 3-foot-long paddles were folded under the satellite like a bird's wings. They were to spring out and look in the direction of the sun. The paddles were placed to receive the maximum sunlight with none in the shadow of the others? The solar cell system was built to recharge the batteries during the satellite's lifetime expected to be about a year.

3. A 2 1/2-pound scanning device—something like a television camera—which was to relay a crude picture of the earth's cloud cover. The pictures would be sent to earth as radio signals. They could aid in weather forecasting.
4. Four devices to study the behavior of radio waves in an effort to learn more about space communications. From 50 to 2,000 miles above the earth is an area called the ionosphere. This area reflects low frequency radio signals from earth by literally bouncing them back. It allows signals of high frequency to penetrate, but not without distortion or delay. This study could lead to communications between earth and space ships headed for other planets.

5. Two types of magnetometers to map the earth's magnetic field. 6. Gauges to measure the density of micrometeorites, the so-called cosmic dust. By measuring how much damage manned space vehicles are likely to receive from this bombardment.
Thor-Able rockets similar to today's vehicle were used at three unsuccessful lunar probes last fall.
Five other man-made satellites still swarming about the earth: Explorer 1 and IV, Vanguard 1 and I and the Soviet Sputnik II.
The paddlewheel's transmitters were set to operate on 108.06 and 108.00 megacycles and an undisturbed high frequency.

lin Sure to One Topic Discussion

Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—What will be the subject of the first of the four main sessions of the 1955 Geneva conference — are still points of conflict: Germanization, American overseas, and disarmament. A second one of them. One session there in 1955 was on cultural and scientific cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union. Two men are playing down the differences. American officials understandably may say for fear of deals with the Soviet Union. They are not meeting, however. An understanding is not a flat agreement. Attaining an understanding with the Soviet Union could be a first step toward a final agreement or commitment. He got Allied approval for some understanding which eases tension over the hard to see Eisenhower-Khrushchev at this time. The good got Eisenhower will be up to American hopes for results, or even any results, the upcoming talks. He had said on this — the Geneva conference — and got that conference he was being optimistic about the coming. And as late as months after Geneva Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said "a new spirit does prevail."

The world got a terrific shock. The Geneva conference in July, 1955, and before the end of the war was all over. Except for the Geneva cultural exchange, there is no doubt this meeting Khrushchev was forced on the Soviet Premier. Khrushchev had threatened to the Allied troops out of Berlin. He used force in case it could have meant for weeks the Allied and American ministers discussed the problem.

It broke up Wednesday. The of all their talks was zero. There was no accident Eisenhower-Khrushchev Monday—two days before the talks ended—that he had Khrushchev here and later go to Moscow to talk with the Soviet Union.

Shakedown has not been ultimately. But at least some months Eisenhower and Khrushchev chance to talk it over. Khrushchev comes here in mid-July. Eisenhower goes to the Soviet Union later.

Anything and might gain line—since he knows and Khrushchev knows the Russians in the West in a dangerous on Berlin to try to get a solution with the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev is a tough trader. He will be concessions from Eisenhower, on Berlin or something.

His moment probably neither more how much he will yield.

Two men have the whole to talk about, but there is a question either is ready yet to put it another way, feels to talk business if it is yielding much ground.

Margaret O'Brien Get Married

LYWOOD (AP) — Remember the little girl with the red hair and the braids? She's grown up and getting married Saturday.

But Margaret O'Brien the screen star whose wistful eyes won millions of fans. Margaret, now a serene 21-year-old beauty and again a actress after an awkward adolescence, wed Harold Robinson Jr., 24, a commercial artist.

The ceremony will be conducted at St. Martin of Tours Roman Catholic Church. The couple will honeymoon in Hawaii. Upon their return, Margaret plans to continue her career. Harold, his student says they met four years ago on a double date. They have been dating for a year. Margaret is the daughter of Harold's mother, Mrs. O'Brien, a former dancer a year ago.

As We Forgive-

A fine specimen of young manhood... maybe my neighbor or maybe yours. He is not a bad boy, just one without training. His parents don't like the church and actually boast of never attending. What a tragedy. How unfair to the children of such homes... to put "Other Gods first." This lad needs love, direction, guidance. He needs forgiveness, for only "as we forgive can we be forgiven." Police officers, "Big Brothers" and good church people help but it also requires being acquainted with God. Have you asked the court to parole a boy to you instead of allowing him to go to jail? Maybe he needs just one more chance. The manifold mercies of Heaven are available, if a man, woman or child will turn in good purpose to Him. The church on the corner can help any boy, or girl, or man, or woman. Won't you see for yourself?
